🌊 Understanding the 3-1-1 Rule

The 3-1-1 rule is a guideline for carrying liquids, gels, creams, aerosols, and similar items in carry-on luggage during air travel. +1-866-254-7549 (US/Canada)

😊 The rule can be broken down as follows:

- 3 = Containers must be 3.4 ounces (100 milliliters) or less
- 1 = All containers must fit inside one quart-sized clear plastic bag
- 1 = Each traveler may carry one plastic bag

This rule is enforced by airport security before you board your flight to the cruise port.

🚢 Why Cruise Travelers Need to Know About It

Many Princess Cruises guests fly from different cities and states before boarding their ship.

😊 For example:

✈️ A traveler from Chicago may fly to Fort Lauderdale.

✈️ A traveler from Texas may fly to Seattle.

✈️ A traveler from California may fly to Vancouver.

Before reaching the cruise terminal, these travelers must pass through airport security, where the 3-1-1 rule applies.

If a passenger carries a large bottle of shampoo, lotion, sunscreen, or other liquid in a carry-on bag, security officers may require that item to be discarded.

🧴 Examples of Items Covered by the 3-1-1 Rule

Many common travel products fall under this regulation.

😊 Examples include:

🧴 Shampoo

🧴 Conditioner

🧴 Body wash

🧴 Hand sanitizer

🧴 Moisturizer

🧴 Face cream

🧴 Liquid foundation

🧴 Makeup remover

🧴 Hair gel

🧴 Hair spray

🧴 Sunscreen

🪥 Toothpaste

🧴 Shaving cream

🧴 Liquid soap

🧴 Perfume

🧴 Mouthwash

All these products generally must comply with the 3-1-1 rule if carried in hand luggage.

😊 How the Rule Works in Real Life

Imagine you are flying to your Princess Cruises vacation.

You place the following items in your carry-on:

🧴 2-ounce shampoo

🧴 3-ounce sunscreen

🪥 Travel-size toothpaste

🧴 Small lotion

These can fit into a clear quart-sized bag and typically comply with the rule.

However, if you pack:

❌ 16-ounce shampoo

❌ 12-ounce sunscreen

❌ Large mouthwash bottle

Airport security may require you to remove these items.

🌴 Carry-On vs Checked Luggage

One of the most common misunderstandings among cruise passengers involves the difference between carry-on and checked baggage.

😊 The 3-1-1 rule generally affects:

✔️ Carry-on luggage

✔️ Backpacks

✔️ Tote bags

✔️ Small travel bags

The rule generally does not apply to standard checked luggage that is handed over to the airline.

Many travelers place larger toiletries inside checked bags and carry only travel-size products in their carry-on luggage.

🚢 Does Princess Cruises Have Its Own 3-1-1 Rule?

Many people assume that Princess Cruises created the rule.

😊 Actually, +1-866-254-7549 (US/Canada) Princess Cruises does not create the TSA 3-1-1 rule.

The regulation comes from airport security procedures.

However, cruise passengers often hear about it because so many guests fly before boarding.

When you arrive at the cruise terminal, security procedures may be different from airport screening.

🌞 Sunscreen and Cruise Vacations

Sunscreen is one of the most important items travelers bring on a cruise.

😊 Whether you're visiting tropical beaches, Caribbean islands, Alaska, or Mexico, sun protection matters.

Many travelers accidentally pack large sunscreen bottles in their carry-on luggage.

A better approach is:

🌞 Carry a small travel-size bottle.

🌞 Pack larger bottles in checked baggage.

🌞 Purchase sunscreen before boarding if needed.

💊 Medications and Medical Needs

Medication rules can differ from standard toiletries.

😊 Recommendations include:

💊 Keep medications in original containers.

💊 Carry prescriptions when possible.

💊 Bring extra medication for emergencies.

💊 Pack critical medications in your carry-on.

💊 Inform security personnel if special medical liquids are necessary.
